ROAD TO RIO

Greetings from Admission

Greetings from the Wyoming Seminary Admission Team!

As the Sem community settles into its 173rd year with our newly installed 12th President, Kevin Rea, I am proud that we continue the strong traditions of The True, The Beautiful, and The Good. Our community is rich with a wonderfully diverse student body from 14 different states across America, 20 countries (including two new countries; Ethiopia and Somalia) and five continents around the world! This year we have seen an increase in applications, enrollment and student qualifications for acceptance. It is the many contributions of the entire Sem community that attract the best and most talented students from all over the globe.

Our Admission team and exceptional faculty and staff, on both Lower and Upper School campuses, continue to partner together to ensure all of our visiting guests and our current families have an exceptional experience while at Wyoming Seminary. Our prospective and current students of today are tomorrow’s alumni, and our Admission team is proud to usher the future of Wyoming Seminary through our doors. To all of our current families, from toddler to postgraduates, we thank you for making our community such a wonderful, special place.

Warm regards,

Corrections:
CAROLINE BLAUM’S ’04 year of graduation was incorrect in the Spring 2016 edition of The Journal.
Gail Smallwood: Looking back on your first full year as Wyoming Seminary president, what two or three experiences or impressions stand out in your mind?

Kevin Rea: My greatest impressions spring from memories of students and faculty supporting and learning from each other.

I recall teaching my Freedom and Identity class last year and watching in amazement as the class (composed of students who hailed from at least six different countries) taught one another! I had asked the class to consider a time when they observed that a truth proclaimed publicly differed from a private observation that they had about that same topic. Well, immediately a student from Afghanistan put her hand up and began a moving monologue about how the media in her country portrays suicide bombers as heroes, and that her family had observed a different reality. The looks on the faces of some of the other students were, to say the least, memorable. After a brief pause, several other hands went up and students delivered stories from their own cultural or family histories, which spoke to the theme of self-identity. On that day my job was easy: the students felt safe enough to teach one another with great skill.

Numerous performing arts and athletics events have shown me the creative vitality our students possess. The atmosphere in the gym last winter during our basketball games, for example, was spectacular. Students supported students, and faculty and staff attendance was great. Seeing other Sem teams sitting in the bleachers cheering on our basketball players inspired me. I take great pride in the performance levels our students consistently demonstrate with music, acting and dance. With two budding ballerinas and a budding football player at home, it is nice to know that we have first-class role models in all these areas.

I will also never forget my first Commencement nor my first eighth grade graduation ceremonies as President of Sem. What an honor to look out and see all those expressions of happiness on the faces of our seniors and eighth graders, their parents and grandparents and also the faculty who helped them get there! That, and the bear hug I received from Sem heavyweight wrestler Mike Rogers at Commencement, will be something I shall not soon forget.

GS: What has it been like for you to lead a school and what have you learned?

KR: It has been thrilling and humbling by turns.

At one of the training institutes I attended for new heads last winter I remember that, when asked what the overarching quality was for successful headship, a highly experienced head immediately replied: stamina. I couldn’t agree more. Nothing, not being Assistant Headmaster nor working for a great headmaster for several years, prepared me for my current calendar! I have learned the importance of getting a good night’s sleep, taking regular walks, enjoying breaks, eating healthy food and spending quality time with friends and family. Doing these things regularly creates the space for me to help others who have pressing hopes and needs.

It is exciting to me to work with our faculty, staff and administration, and I want to make sure I am at my best for that on an ongoing basis. Good stamina helped me appreciate all the funny, moving and exhilarating moments that defined my first year.

GS: As the parent of three Lower School students, what impresses you about the curriculum and environment of the Lower School? How do the Lower School and Upper School educational programs support and enhance each other?

KR: What is there NOT to love about the environment at the Lower School? There are so many things we as a family love about the Lower School. When we arrived a year ago, as you can imagine, all three of my children were somewhat apprehensive that their dad announced they were about to leave all their earthly friends in Westchester County, N.Y. with no return date! The Lower School faculty could not have been more welcoming and warm to them. Feeling safe and supported, my children began to open their minds and hearts, and the rest, as the saying goes, is history.

As President I observe a complementary reality, which is that our faculty encourage our students to imagine different ways of solving the same problem. They value the individual skills of our students and seek to strengthen them. Our Lower School faculty focus on seeding a deep sense of understanding and skills building, not an obsession with answers. I am watching my children (and all the children in the Lower School) appreciate the creative beauty of understanding how to solve problems rather than focus on the singular fact at the end which is somehow expected to be revelatory. This process also occurs in the Upper School where, although the material may be more “advanced,” the focus on the individual student’s personal, intellectual and social development is the same. This is one of the deepest ways we are one school.

GS: As we look ahead to 2019 and the 175th anniversary of the school’s founding in 1844, we will have many achievements and changes to celebrate. What are some of your goals for the school leading up to 2019, and what would you like Sem to look like as we move into the third decade of the 21st century?

KR: One of the things I learned from reading Leroy Bugbee’s Wyoming Seminary 1844-1944 is that we possess a richly textured past. Traditions matter around here! At the same time, as an English major, I notice that, throughout our history, just beneath the surface of our traditions, moves a spirit of innovation. When I spoke to our faculty at the start of my tenure in our first faculty meeting I mentioned “the Wyoming spirit.” My goal for Sem as we approach our 175th year is to cultivate this spirit, to seek it out in our past and our present and to give it oxygen so that it might burn brilliantly and spread warmth and light. I would like us to imagine ourselves as simultaneously 175 years old and on the cutting edge of educational practice. Our unique approach resides in the pedagogical creativity of our faculty who spoke repeatedly to me last year about interdisciplinary teaching. I notice it in how our faculty connects the teaching of STEM with the arts, the teaching of an academic subject with service, the Lower School with the Upper School and our local traditions with global awareness.

Like every independent school (except for the few in economic bubbles such as Manhattan or San Francisco) in the United States, we face ongoing challenges to define our enrollment. One of my central goals as we approach our 175th anniversary is to diversify our intake within Pennsylvania and the United States. We have so many enthusiastic alumni all over the country who cite Wyoming Seminary as being one of the reasons for their happiness and success. Making stronger connections with every generation of our alumni will help us become stronger. I aspire to strengthen our interconnectedness, past with present, traditions with innovations, alumni with prospective students, parents with their own children, Board with our faculty and staff, and technology with the arts to name just a few.

GS: You’ve had both teaching and administrative experience in both English schools and in American independent education. How do you think Sem compares to other American independent schools, and what do you consider to be our distinguishing characteristic(s)?

KR: Jennifer and I made the decision to be here because Sem is unique. My 11 years as a teacher, dorm parent and coach in English private (what they call “public”) schools allowed me the privilege of living in outstanding international learning environments. All the schools where I worked possessed top-flight academics and traditions that go back to the Middle Ages and early Renaissance. One of the least appreciated aspects of British society, however, is that island’s ability to encourage true diversity. In addition, the lack of the Puritan background there allows for a great sense of self-expression and creativity. Before coming to Sem Jennifer and I would often talk about how much we missed British eccentricity, of being in a place where an individual feels free to express their truest self.

Independent schools in the United States fall into one of two traditions, the East Coast, New England prep school model or the British model. I view Seminary as following in the international, British tradition where individuality, creativity and rigorous academics forge a powerful combination. The truth is we are unlike other mid-Atlantic and East coast prep schools that fall into line with the New England tradition. We are also different from all of our local competitors from the Catholic, charter and public sectors. Our global makeup, the creativity we encourage and the unfettered individuality we foster in our students shows me that our roots run deep, back to Britain and John Wesley who eschewed rigid social hierarchies, dedicating himself to social service, global awareness and self realization.

GS: Are you teaching any classes this school year and, if so, what class? What do you enjoy most about teaching, and why is it important for a school president to continue to teach?

KR: I teach Freshman English or Literature of Self Discovery (see my previous answer to how we are unlike all other prep schools). Presidents have always taught at Wyoming Seminary, and I see it as integral to my calling as an educator. I know many other heads who do not teach and who maintain that heads should not teach as that is not what we are technically hired to do. I feel that teaching helps me understand what I am hired to do better.

When the second trimester begins I will begin teaching Freedom and Identity. In that class I teach mostly juniors and seniors. At the end of the class the students submit a project centered on self-reflection about their own identity. Given the global nature of the Seminary classroom, this project yields rich results.

GS: What is your favorite part of the day, and why?

KR: I actually have three favorite times of the day when I teach. It is a great way to be in the moment and engage with students—i.e. the real reason I am here.

Finally I love being on campus during and after dinner with my family, the boarders, and the residential faculty families. Watching members of the women’s ice hockey team carry my five-year-old daughter Imogen on their shoulders never ceases to make my day.

GS: If you and your family were to sum up your Sem experience so far in one sentence, what would it be?

There is more in you than you know.

No Bigger Stage:

Sem field hockey stars shine at Rio Olympics

Ever since their years of playing together on the field hockey pitch at Wyoming Seminary, Kat Sharkey ‘08 and Kelsey Kolojejchick ‘09 have been working for the day when they could play field hockey for the United States in the Olympic Games. Their dreams came true this year, when they were among 16 women on the United States team that traveled to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil in August to compete against the world’s finest field hockey teams.

“One of the most memorable things was our first game, standing there with my teammates, hearing the national anthem playing before the game; that was very special,” said Sharkey. “During the anthem I was thinking about how far I’ve come as an individual and it began to sink in that I was about to play in the Olympics.”

“It was such an honor to represent our country, and I just loved stepping on the field with my teammates and singing our national anthem,” Kolojejchick said. “I also loved winning games and our goal celebrations. That just gave me goosebumps. Those moments were really fun and exciting. And also being able to see our family and friends in the stands; I really loved that as well.”

The U.S. team had high expectations going into the Olympics because it had just earned a bronze medal in the 2016 Champions Trophy Tournament in London, England, moving from an international ranking of ninth to fifth place. The athletes had already faced the leading teams from Argentina, Australia, Germany and Great Britain, and their success inspired many to begin thinking that the Americans could compete for a medal, the first time since the 1984 Games in Los Angeles when the team won bronze.

And for the first half of the Olympic tournament, that promise seemed to be coming true. The U.S., placed in Pool B against Argentina, Australia, India, Japan and Great Britain, won four games in pool play, taking an unprecedented American 4-0 record into the fifth and final pool game against Britain, also unbeaten. The Brits and the Americans battled through a scoreless first half, but at 5:30 into the second half, Sharkey sent a powerful backhand shot at the goal, only to be turned away by Britain’s goalkeeper. The Americans found the net about three minutes later, but Britain rallied and scored twice, handing the USA field hockey team its first loss, 2-1. (Great Britain later defeated the Netherlands for the gold medal.)

Nonetheless, the U.S. team moved on to quarterfinal competition, a knock-out round battle against Germany. The Germans struck first, scoring two goals in the first period, and their physical defense allowed the Americans only seven shots on goal. Although both Kolojejchick and Sharkey made key offensive moves that put their team in scoring range, the German defense thwarted nearly every attempt. Team USA scored a goal with 3:54 remaining in the game, but the Germans held on to win 2-1; they later beat New Zealand to take the bronze medal.

Both Kolojejchick and Sharkey are taking the next few months to rest, and Kolojejchick needs surgery and rehabilitation for her left wrist, injured more than a year ago. She expects to go back into training in January, 2017; Sharkey is exploring her options. Both women are honored to have represented the United States in Olympic field hockey competition, are thrilled with the coverage their games received in the United States, and hope the sport will grow in popularity across the country.

“I’m proud of us because we never gave up. That’s always been our motto,” Kolojejchick said in an interview with the Wilkes-Barre Times Leader. “I love this team. I wouldn’t trade it for the world.”

Although the loss dashed Team USA’s medal hopes, its fifth-place, 4-2 Olympic tournament record marks a substantial improvement from the team’s last-place finish in 2012. With wins against field hockey powerhouse Australia and Argentina, the American women’s field hockey team has served notice that it is now among the world’s top squads.

“It was so exciting to see that we were starting to make a name for ourselves when we started winning,” Kolojejchick said. “We hope that some young girls will get motivated when they see us go to the Olympics and say, ‘maybe that could be us someday.’”

“Most people don’t realize that it’s a three- or four-year process of putting in long days of training, and those are the days that really matter when the big tournaments come around. Every single grueling workout and training session was so worth it in Rio,” said Sharkey. “I am very thankful for the opportunity.”

HAL BUCKINGHAM, Bloomfield, Conn., and his wife, Joyce, met
TISH HEFFERNAN FERENBACH, Essex, Conn. for lunch in June. Tish related this story about COLLETTE TOUEY KEAN, New York, N.Y. "Collette has relished the recent Downton Abbey series on public television. Some years ago, Collette’s late husband, Ben Kean, was the physician for the Earl and Countess of Carnarvon (‘Grantham in the series) and they became good friends. They were guests at Highclere Castle (‘Downton Abbey in the series) several times and Collette has enjoyed seeing on television all the rooms and sights of Highclere she once visited."

ROBERT HARTMAN (deceased March, 2015) was inducted into the National Wrestling Hall of Fame in Stillwater, Okla. at the New York State Chapter Annual Dinner on April 29th, 2016 at the Melville Marriott Hotel, Melville, N.Y.

From a news release: "Robert Stephen Hartman’s career flourished as an ambassador for the great sport of amateur wrestling. He enjoyed tremendous success as both competitor and coach. Bob will be forever remembered as the very first All American wrestler at Columbia. He was twice named National Junior College Coach of the Year at Farmingdale University and was elected to the NJCAA Wrestling Hall of Fame. Bob also had the distinguished honor to be selected to coach the U.S. Greco-Roman wrestling team at the World Games in Moscow. The National Wrestling Hall of Fame is honored to recognize his outstanding life which epitomized all that is good in amateur wrestling."

HAROLD BIRTH, Santa Monica, Calif., wrote, "I remain President/CEO of the Home Owners Association in Santa Monica for the last 36 years. I also stay active as a docent for the Museum of Flying at the Santa Monica Airport, as well as flying museums elsewhere in California, Ohio and the United Kingdom."

NANCY WAGNER BANZ, Venice, Fla., wrote, "We still love Florida after 15 years here. Bob and I both have health issues, but so far can deal with them. Our 60th wedding anniversary coincides with next spring's reunion and we will try to make it since we hope to come north."

MAGDALEN BENISH, Plains, received an honorary doctorate degree from King’s College in May. Mag was instrumental in raising $100,000 for the dedication of The Father Murgas Room at King's. The room is a collection of items from Father Josel Murgas' life: the desk where he did much of his work, several paintings and drawings, a set of priestly vestments, his butterfly collection, and a commemoration of his electrical experiments.

Father Murgas came to America in 1896 after being ordained at age 24 and attending both an art institute and electrical college. In 1897 he was appointed pastor of Sacred Heart of Jesus Church on North Main Street in Wilkes-Barre. During his tenure the parish built a new church and a school, both of which later displayed some of his artworks. Father Murgas earned 17 patents by 1904 and was the first person to transmit words wirelessly, from Wilkes-Barre to Scranton, saying “Gloria in Excelsis Deo.” The man was a priest, an artist, and an electrical engineer.

DONALD ROESKE, Apple Valley, Minn., wrote, "My wife, Peggy, and I recently moved to senior housing, still in Apple Valley. I continue to be active with the Boy Scouts, with our church, and with veterans’ organizations. We have six grandchildren: two in Minnesota and four in New Jersey."

KATHLEEN HOWARD SUTHERLAND, Portland, Maine, wrote, “John and I attended my 60th reunion at Sem, then attended my granddaughter Jamie’s graduation from the University of Maine at Orono, followed by a two week visit to Scotland. All wonderful events! I was elected President of the World Affairs Council of Maine at its annual meeting in June."

ELAINE LEANDRI BALDERSON, Warwick, wrote, "Bruce and I moved from Doylestown to a very active 55+ community (Heritage Creek in Warwick, Pa.) where we are members of a number of committees and participate in many activities. ‘Snow birds’ spend their winters in the south (we spend almost a month in the Keys), but the greater part of being away from Heritage Creek is when we ‘sea gulls’ head for the Jersey Shore. Bruce and I spend our summers in Ocean City, N.J."

“At all times of the year, we spend time enjoying our two sons, their spouses, and our four grandchildren. In fact, we recently enjoyed a family trip to ‘Beaches’ in Turks and Caicos. This news drives home the old sayings: ‘life is not a dress rehearsal’ and ‘do more of what you can do today.’ With those thoughts in mind, and with continual patching up by our excellent medical profession, Alicia and I continue to put one foot in front of the other, daily, and do some very interesting things."

“Since 2008, we have: taken four temporary duty assignments for the U.S. Department of State – in Kazakhstan, Kuwait, Algiers, and Oman; taken a trip to the Holy Land, starting in Amman, Jordan, going through the West Bank (Bethlehem), to Jerusalem and back; and taken a fabulous two-week trip to Italy and Tunisia, where we visited old Tunisian friends. On this side of the globe, we have completed several road trips of the USA, both by automobile and also with our 25-foot Airstream travel trailer, including a 12,800 mile trek in 2001 from Florida to Alaska and back."

“Tomorrow, we are hooking up our Dodge Ram to the Airstream and we’re off again to make another loop from Florida, to Washington State, California and back to Florida. Oh, to see again the Badlands, Glacier National Park, Kodachrome Basin, the Utah Canyons and all that is in between. What a rush."

“The message – we had a very dear old friend, Mike Cebrick. Mike was a carpenter – he could build virtually anything from a coal breaker to line cabinetry. Besides his craft, Mike loved nothing more than to hunt and fish. In fact, on some work days, Mike would go out fishing in the middle of the night and arrive at work by 7:30 in the morning, ready to put in a full day’s work, with a creel full of bass or trout. In his late 80s, one day, after he did not return home as usual, Mike was found by one of his fishing buddies in his favorite trout stream, dressed in his waders, lying in the creek bed with his favorite fly rod in his hand – what a testament to living life to its fullest."

“Hopefully, we can all follow in Mike’s footsteps. See you in May, 2017!”

Bangle Stacker. Like so many products, the Bangle Stacker’s roots can be traced to a simple problem: how to organize jewelry efficiently. One rainy day in July 2014, Kate tried to enlist her daughters in a project that tackled the issue. Neither was interested in the least, so Kate grabbed duct tape to secure two golf tees and a pair of toilet paper rolls atop a plastic plate.

What initially prompted eye rolls from her tween-age children has developed into an eye-catching product called the Bangle Stacker featuring five vertical posts that hold bracelets, rings and other accessories.

It has made a substantial splash, including a January appearance on a NBC’s popular Today program—a segment led by Stephanie Scisco, a Real Simple magazine editor. “That was such a validation of my instincts,” says Kate. “There are so many people, particularly women, whose dressers are a mess because they don’t have an efficient, sleek way of keeping their jewelry organized without storing it in a box.” The Bangle Stacker was featured in the June Issue of Real Simple.

At first, O’Malley figured that something like her make-shift craft project existed in the marketplace. But after scouring retailers, large and small, she found nothing with the Bangle Stacker’s qualities. Specifically, no other product enables the display of jewelry, rings, hair and other accessories neatly atop a dresser.

Made of acrylic, and coming in clear and black options, the Bangle Stacker is a 10-inch wide, 7-inch long tray with five vertical posts: two larger (which can fit a bracelet with a diameter as large as 3 ⅜ inches) and three smaller (especially useful for rings and earrings).

FRIENDS
SIDNEY APFELBAUM, Northumberland, August 25, 2016. Sidney was the husband of CAROLE HERZ APFELBAUM ’44, and the grandfather of JON SIDNEY APFELBAUM ’11, among others. His son, Michael Apfelbaum served on the Wyoming Seminary Board of Trustees from July, 2010 to September, 2015, when he and his wife Christina were killed in a plane crash. Sidney was a principal with the Degenstein Foundation, which has been a supporter of Sem scholarships and programs for many years. Sidney and Carole received the Wyoming Seminary Joseph C. Donchez Distinguished Service Award in 2008.
As she watches the Sem Lower School girls lacrosse teams practice on Zimmerman Field, TINA PODRASKY ’08 can’t help but see herself in them. She remembers discovering lacrosse as an Upper School student and how much she enjoyed the game’s speed and the thrill of scoring. Now, having completed her second year as coach of the Lower School lacrosse team, she appreciates the opportunity to share her passion, skills and experience with her young team.

“I feel a lot of satisfaction when I see the girls come together and enjoy the sport. To see them happy and working hard to improve their skills is an awesome feeling,” she says.

A graduate of the Rochester Institute of Technology with both a bachelor’s and master’s degree in engineering, Podrasky was a member of RIT’s varsity lacrosse team, where she played attack in the NCAA Div. III Liberty Conference. There she tied for second most assists in a single season in the conference, and help lead the Tigers to post-season play.

Employed as a station engineer for FedEx Express, Podrasky dedicates her spring afternoons to introducing more than 50 middle-school girls to the basics of the game. During the spring 2016 season, she led the seventh-eighth-grade Blue Knights to a 7-1-3 record and a decisive first-place finish in the Back Mountain Brawl.

Podrasky first made her mark at Sem as a tenacious defender on the Upper School girls ice hockey team. To stay in shape, she tried lacrosse and found she loved the game. Some of her ice hockey skills translated well to lacrosse and she developed a wicked side shot that many opposing goalies couldn’t stop. She completed her Sem athletic career as captain of both ice hockey and lacrosse teams.

Now she’s inspiring a new generation of Sem lacrosse players and working to raise the team’s competitiveness against programs from outside the area.

“This game helps our students learn important life lessons, like how to step out of their comfort zones, develop new skills through hard work and work as a team,” she says. “We enjoy our successes and aspire for more.”

On behalf of the advancement team, I extend my heartfelt thanks to alumni, parents, and friends of Wyoming Seminary, whose generosity is celebrated in our Report of Gifts. The report recognizes Sem community members who made a contribution to the School from July 1, 2015 to June 30, 2016. They include leadership-level donors, Annual Fund participants, corporate and foundation contributors, volunteers, and donors who have created bequests and other gifts that Sem will realize in the future.

The 2015-16 campaign marks the first time in history where gift receipts have totaled more than $4 million for six consecutive years. Of even more importance, this is the first time that total annual giving has exceeded the $2 million mark; the previous high was $1.73 million in 2007-08. Special thanks to Barbara Williams ’74 and Robert Tamburro ’91, national chairpersons of the annual giving campaign, for this remarkable accomplishment! Barb, Joe and their team, especially the members of the Leadership Gifts Committee, did an outstanding job.

Since October 2001, Wyoming Seminary has been approved by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as a “Scholarship Organization” under the guidelines of the Educational Improvement Tax Credit (EITC) program, and since August 2012 under the guidelines of the Opportunity Scholarship Tax Credit (OSTC) program. Through these programs, Pennsylvania corporations who pay certain state taxes can make a gift to the scholarship program at Sem in lieu of paying up to 90% of those state taxes if the company makes a two year commitment. More than $664,000 was contributed to these programs and we are most grateful to the following companies for their support during the current fiscal year: Almo Corporation, Benco Dental Company, Brown Brothers Harriman & Co., Cabot Oil & Gas, Carr & Duff Inc., Community Bank N. A., Community Foundation of the Endless Mountains, Fidelity Deposit and Discount Bank, First National Bank of Pennsylvania, First National Community Bank, Getaways, Inc., Henkels Foundation, Koberlein Environmental, Luzerne Bank, J. P. Mascaro & Sons, Medico Industries, NBT Bank, N.A., One Source Staffing Solutions, PNC Bank, Penngift Foundation, Pride Mobility, Snyder & Clemente, Straub Metal International, UGI Storage Company, and United Way of Wyoming Valley.

A school like Wyoming Seminary has not been able to grow and develop the way it has, however, by current gifts alone. Indeed many of the gifts that have helped to build the School’s endowment to a market value of $56.5 million on June 30, 2016 have come in the form of bequests and deferred gifts. Since 1982, Wyoming Seminary has received more than $22.6 million in estate gifts. We are honored the following alumni and friends continued this legacy during the 2016 fiscal year with bequest distributions coming from each of their estates to Sem:

Barbara Clark Butler ’48
Nancy Abbott Cohen ’44
William Geise, Jr. ’40
Nancy Jackson Hartman ’48
Robert Hartman ’48
Ruth Pettebone Hofford ’43
Richard Kniffen ’56
Sandra Lloyd ’48

Charlotte Benjamin Morris ’42
Edythe Dickover Tessen ’35
Elizabeth Stevens Walter ’35

As we commence Sem’s 173rd academic year, we also look ahead to Sem’s 175th anniversary and to this year beginning the process of developing the strategic plans and vision of President Kevin Rea and the Board of Trustees that will propel the School even further ahead in the final quarter of the institution’s first two centuries.

On behalf of the students and faculty who are the ultimate beneficiaries of your generosity, I express our gratitude and the hope that we will continue to merit your continued support in the years to come.

John H. Shafer ’71
Vice President of Advancement
Madeline I. Kropp ’05 Joins the Advancement Team

Madeline I. Kropp, of Shavertown, has been named the new Wyoming Seminary Director of Annual Giving. As Director of Annual Giving, Kropp is responsible for a comprehensive annual giving program and fund raising efforts from all school constituencies in support of all current operations.

Kropp, a native of Dallas and 2005 Sem graduate, most recently served as manager of the Baldwin Fund at The Baldwin School in Bryn Mawr. She was responsible for implementation of The Baldwin Fund Annual Plan and managed all aspects of the school’s annual fund program. She also served as The Baldwin School’s alumnae and advancement coordinator, assistant director of The Baldwin Fund and development associate. Prior to joining the Baldwin School she served as an admissions and advancement assistant at The Friends School of Mullica Hill in Mullica Hill, N.J.

Kropp is a member of the Council for the Support and Advancement of Education (CASE). She also has served as a volunteer for the Ulman Cancer Fund for Young Adults, located in Baltimore, Md., and served on several planning committees and as a leader of Vacation Bible School at St. Paul’s Lutheran Church in Dallas. Kropp holds a bachelor of arts degree in humanities, art history concentration, from Rosemont College.

Walter Bequest Third Largest Gift in School History

Elizabeth Stevens Walter ’35 has made a bequest in excess of $4 million to Wyoming Seminary. This is the third largest gift in school history, according to John Shafer ’71, Vice President of Advancement.

“The F. M. Kirby Foundation and Joseph Donchess ’26 are the only two other benefactors of this institution who have made larger gifts,” Shafer commented. “We are so honored that Betty chose to perpetuate her association with Sem with this truly remarkable gift.”

The only child of Louis C. and Margaret Jones Stevens, Betty was born in Johnstown and attended the Wilkes-Barre Institute, Wyoming Seminary and Barnard College. Secretary and Vice President of the Adelphian Society during her three years at Sem, she was also elected first vice president of the Class of 1935 during her junior year. A member of both the Opinator and Wyoming Boards, she was manager of the field hockey team during both her junior and senior years.

Betty was married to Christian Walter ’30, third generation owner of Walter’s Shoe Store in Wilkes-Barre. Chris passed away in 1991 and their only daughter Ellen also preceeded Betty in death. Betty served as the president of the Junior League and as president of the Wyoming Valley Crippled Children’s Association. She also served on the board of the Wilkes-Barre Visiting Nurse Association, the United Fund and the Irem Temple Women’s Golf Association.

“Through the years Betty would always attend class reunions and she was a regular donor to the Annual Fund,” Shafer added. “I fondly remember Betty and Agnes Gregson ’35, two local members of the class of ’35, always offering their homes to host ice breaker events. Wyoming Seminary always had a special place in Betty’s heart; she loved hearing from and communicating with classmates.”

In her will, Betty Walter stipulated that $500,000 of the $4 million bequest be used to establish a scholarship endowment fund to help academically talented students with financial need to be able to attend Sem. In addition, at the June 2016 meeting of the Board of Trustees, the Trustees voted to allocate a small portion of the estate to refurbish the school dining room in Fleck Hall. This project will be undertaken in the summer of 2017 and, once completed, the dining room will be named in honor of Betty and Chris Walter. The $3.3 million balance of the bequest will be added to the unrestricted endowment of the school.

The Westlake Society recognizes alumni and friends of Wyoming Seminary who have made provisions for a gift to the School in their estate plans, or through membership in The Living Endowment Society. This recognition society was previously known as The Planned Giving Honor Roll, but was renamed in memory of Emory H. Westlake, Class of 1896, in recognition of his generous bequest to the School in 1996 at the time of the 150th Anniversary Campaign. Mr. Westlake creatively planned his estate in order to maximize his giving to those charities most important to him. Within a few months of the 100th anniversary of his graduation, Mr. Westlake’s bequest created the Westlake Scholarship Endowment Fund at Wyoming Seminary. The School feels his wise use of charitable and estate gift planning is an example for others to emulate.

In addition to the names that follow, there are others who have included Wyoming Seminary in their estate plans, but at their request, their names are not listed.

Appearance and Development

In recognition of the invigorating leadership brought to Wyoming Seminary by Kevin Rea, the twelfth President of the School, the Board of Trustees has created an annual giving challenge fund in the amount of $100,000. President Rea has determined to use this challenge opportunity to support and honor the lifeblood of the Upper and Lower School campuses—the faculty!

The challenge works as follows: the Board will match all gifts to the 2016-17 campaign on a two-for-one basis from donors who did not make a gift to the 2015-16 campaign (July 1, 2015 to June 30, 2016) up to an individual total of $250, while all increased gifts from donors who contributed during the 2015-16 year will be matched dollar for dollar up to an individual total of $500.

The $100,000 challenge pool from the Board of Trustees represents a pledged increase of their collective giving of that amount compared to 2015-16.

The Wyoming Seminary Office of Alumni and Development is grateful for the generosity of each person who has supported the Annual Giving Campaign. Your gift to Wyoming Seminary represents your commitment to the future of the school and its students. To give back to the 2016-17 Annual Giving Campaign, please visit www.wyomingseminary.org/donate or call (570) 270-2140.

Douglas Piazza
Music Teacher
“You will never hear me say that I go to work. I go to school. Coming to teach at Wyoming Seminary has given me more opportunities and learning experiences than any college can offer. I have the pleasure of working with students who want to enrich their lives through education. I have to pinch myself sometimes because I work at such a fine institution. I am lucky to be here.”

Jessica Liu Gensel
Mandarin Teacher
“Teaching at Sem means a lot to me. I feel like Sem is my home: my students are my own children and my colleagues are my family members. I want to teach students more and see them achieve more like I would want my own children to. I love sharing their successes and losses and every memorable moment with them.”
